BANDITS ROB MOKENA DRUG STORE

Druggist, Wife And Customer Bound With Tapes; $275 Loot Taken

Richard Hensel, Mokena druggist, was startled Monday evening about eight o'clock when three men walked in his drug store armed with a sawed-off shot gun and an automatic revolver and one of the trio said "This is a stickup. Get in there" meaning to step into the adjoining living quarters.

Mrs. Hensel heard the commotion and when she stepped into the store, she too, was ordered in a rear room. Mr. and Mrs. Hensel were forced to lie down on the floor while one of the gang taped their hands and feet so they could not move. Next a telephone was torn from the wall. While one of the trio was left to guard the robbers' victims, the other two members of the gang ransacked the drug store taking $35 in cash from the cash register and about $225 in merchandise consisting of cameras, watches, fountain pens, face powders, perfumes, cigars, cigarettes, and numerous other articles. One of the robbers asked Mr. Hensel if he had any jewelry. He showed a Masonic ring he was wearing but the robber said "No, brother, we don't want that."

The robber gang remained in the drug store nearly an hour. During the course of the holdup, Karl Kraus of Mokena, a customer, walked in. He was immediately covered and was also taken into the rear room, forced to lie on the floor along with the druggist and his wife. His hands and feet were also bound with tape. One of the gang searched his pockets and took $11 in cash.

When they left the robber gang took the key to the store door with them.

Mrs. Hensel's hands had been bound in front of her and she was able to move her fingers and after a 20 minute struggle managed to loosen her husband's bounds. Soon as he was able to free himself he unbound his wife and Mr. Kraus.

A telephone call was put in from the telephone office next door to the Will county Sheriff's office in Joliet. In a few minutes Chief Deputy Sheriff Gordon Breen and several deputies were on the scene of the crime, but found no trace of the robber trio.

The holdups were very abusive and used profane and dirty language and kicked Mr. Hensel several times.

Monday night shortly after 9 o'clock three holdup men waylaid police officer John Umland in Matteson. They knocked him unconscious, took his revolver from him and stuck up a tavern, cleaning out the cash register and taking $60 from one of the patrons. The holdup men fled in a high powered car and no trace has been found of them.

Orland Basketball Season Finished

The Orland Park boys finished their basketball season and dished up some real performances and interesting games to watch. Orland Tax Distribution Is Speeded Up Distribution of tax collections to Orland township officials was speeded up 300 per cent within the past two years as a result of installation of special tax-spreading machines in the county treasurer's office under the direction of County Commissioner William N. Erickson.

The installation of the machinery is preliminary to further action to increase the efficiency of the county treasurer's administration contained in the program of the five suburban county commissioners who are being endorsed for renomination in the Republican primary race.

Besides Commissioner Erickson, the group includes William Busse of Mt. Prospect, George A. Miller and H. Wallace Caldwell of Oak Park, and Carl J. Carlson of Blue Island.

For years, the tremendous increase in volume of tax collections by the county treasurer was gradually slowing up the refunding process to the 443 tax-spending bodies in Cook county, comprising municipalities, park districts, school districts, sanitary districts, and other governmental subdivisions.

When a local taxpayer made his payment at the treasurer's office, it took the county from three to six months to return the local government's share. With the installation of the new machinery, the local tax-spending bodies are able to get their funds from a week to ten days. This accelerated distribution of money has enabled local bodies to take up their tax anticipation warrants and save thousands of dollars in interest charges.

Under this recent program pushed through the county board by the five sitting Republican commissioners, the present high-speed machinery can determine instantly the exact money due each governmental unit at all times. Hundreds of local officials have praised the action of the county board in revising the antiquated tax distribution methods in vogue for the past decades.

-18-

"Yank off bridle and saddle and turn him loose." Suddenly Joyce began to sob. "What are you crying about? There's simply nothing else to do."

"Oh, it's not that!" cried Joyce, still weeping as she unbuckled throat latch and girth. "It's Tronido. I'm—I'm crying about Tronido."

"Don't," said Dirk, "please don't, or you'll have me so I can't do a damn thing. Don't you suppose—Hell!" Then he continued quietly, "Joyce, hold on a bit; we may both have to ride Rayo. The battery's run down."

"Oh!" she gasped, grief forgotten in the face of fresh disaster.

Suddenly Dirk started tearing out the front cushion. "Here it is, thank God—the crank. Get in, Joyce. Take the throttle and work the choke. Hurry!"

He leaped out and in a moment was cranking with all his might. No use. Not a spark. Then he began using reason and judgment, giving Joyce time enough to do the same. They teased the motor—teased it into a first gasp of life. Then more teasing. Then a roar, so sudden, so mighty that it seemed the old car would shake itself to pieces before Joyce could shut off the throttle. The backfiring was deafening, more like a machine gun than a motor.

"Oh, Dirk!" she screamed though he was already at her side, "I can't make it stop!"

"Who's a fool now?" he yelled at the top of his voice. "Take your foot off the accelerator and push yourself over."

Then he was at the wheel, backing, turning cautiously for fear of the spikes of niggerheads, but finally straightening out on the Toluca trail, shifting into second and at last into high. Joyce turned, knelt on the seat and looked back. The riders were closer now, quite close; some of them were already dismounting, their carbines unslung, and running to kneel on the farther edge of the barranca.

"Never mind the bumps, Dirk," she called over her shoulder, "give her gas and take everything that comes. The shooting is about to start."

"How far off are they?" asked Dirk.

Then and there Joyce was stumped, for is there a woman alive who knows by sight the difference between a hundred yards and a half a mile? "I don't know," she said; "I haven't the least idea."

"Of course you have!" he shouted impatiently. "How far? Is it ten yards or a mile?"

"I don't know," said Joyce. "I'm not being stubborn; I just don't know." Then she cried, "Never mind—here it comes!"

The first bullet struck in line but well behind the car; it ricocheted and passed over them with a screaming whine. That was enough for Dirk, he opened the throttle wide and sent the flivver careening across the prairie, making note of the direction he would have to take to bring it back to the abandoned trail. More bullets followed but none so threatening as the first and presently there was silence. Joyce sat down and sank back, sighing her relief.

"I guess we're safe, Dirk. Hadn't we better nurse the tires a bit? They must be pretty soft."

"You're right," said Dirk, slowing down. "How long has this soap box been parked in that gully?"

"Let me see," said Joyce calculatingly. "Is it a year? No; it can't be. I'll give you a chance to figure it out for yourself, Dirk. How many days have you been at La Barranca?"

"Nine," said Dirk promptly.

"Then add three to that," said Joyce. "It doesn't seem possible. Twelve days, less than two weeks! I was away twelve years; I've been back twelve days. Somehow it doesn't make sense."

CHAPTER XVI

At the first crossroads they were lucky enough to get gas and the poor old flivver, faithful to the last, limped into Toluca a little before noon. Abandoning it in a side street to avoid unnecessary complications, they walked to the San Carlos and before long were feasting on crystal trout fresh from the Lerma and certain equally famed accessories. More than once they raised their eyes to look at each other across the table, then dropped them because their hearts were too full of content for words.

But the moment the meal was over Dirk said without warning, "Joyce, will you marry me? I've got to know."

"Yes, Dirk. When?"

"This afternoon. As soon as we get to the city."

"Oh? Why wait till then?" asked Joyce.

But Dirk was in no playing mood. "Because there's no American consul in Toluca," he answered gravely.

"Does there have to be a consul?"

"Either that or some authorized officer from the embassy. Any preacher in good standing can do the trick, but the presence of an American official as witness is what makes it legal at home."

"I see," said Joyce slowly; then she raised her eyes to his face. "Dirk, I'm yours. I'll do whatever you want me to."

He reached out to lay his hand on hers. "I love you, Joyce."

"And I love you, Dirk. Is that why we must hurry so? You'd think it would make us willing to wait."

He frowned. "You haven't told me your reason for rushing to Mexico City, but I think I guessed it."

"To attend to General Onelia," said Joyce, also frowning.

"I thought so," said Dirk, "and that's why we're going to marry today. When you take on Onelia or the ambassador or any other small then looked up and grinned. "I admit it's pretty bad, sir, especially since I come as a private citizen."

"What do you mean? I haven't fired you yet."

"I was merely anticipating," said Dirk, looking around.

"What are you hunting for?"

"Two things. A chair with a washable cover and a drink."

"Forgive me, my boy. Sit anywhere you like; there's nobody to kick about it since I'm a grass-widower from a week ago till the Christmas holidays. I'll ring for your usual. Come on, now; what's on your mind?"

"I'm here for assistance, sir. I want you to help me marry Miss Joyce Sewell of La Barranca this afternoon."

The ambassador collapsed into the nearest chair and groaned. Then they talked—talked as only two men who possess an identical background can talk. The rapid fire of questions and answers covered not only Dirk's absence but swept from such broad considerations as his ancestry for three generations back, down to the trifling matter of his present private income in dollars and cents with salary omitted. Yet there was no confusion. When they got through there was nothing either of them didn't know about the inner and outer workings of Dirk Van Suttart.

"Let's see where we stand," said the ambassador, summing up. "You want to marry Miss Sewell. Well, she's certainly of age as far as that operation is concerned, so stopping you by getting her stepmother to stop her is definitely out. Then you state you can't wait even to telephone your people because of the urgency of securing Onelia's aid, because what they say wouldn't make any difference anyway, and finally because they're probably in Europe." He scowled. "The first of those three reasons is what's bothering me—trouble heading straight this way."

"You needn't worry on that score," said Dirk. "As a matter of fact, sir, Miss Sewell emphatically doesn't want the aid of this establishment. She says she can get along a whole lot better without it. Her idea is that ever since embassies have been run for trade and to hell with the trader they've become mere stumbling-blocks to the pioneer—also a constant pain, an eyecore."

"Eh?" exclaimed the ambassador, astonished; then he asked with genuine solicitude, "Are you sure she's quite all there?"

"Quite," said Dirk confidently. "The truth is, sir, I'm inclined to agree with her. Give her a chance and she'll make a monkey of Onelia—which is more than we have ever been able to do."

"Dirk—I'm calling you Dirk because I want you to think of me as sitting here in place of your father—in less than two weeks this girl has managed to do extraordinary things to your mind, so much so that I beg you not to trust it until you've taken advice from someone capable of judging her with impartial eyes."

"I agree to that," said Dirk promptly. "What about yours? Do you think they would be impartial?"

The ambassador frowned, then smiled. "All I can say is I'd try my best to make them so. When can you bring the paragon around?"

"Don't think me impertinent, but there isn't time for that. Besides, since she has nothing but riding clothes she might find it embarrassing."

"I take it you're inviting me to your house," stated the ambassador.

"Yes, sir," said Dirk, "and I'd be a lot more humble about it if you hadn't waived your ambassadorship to act as my father."

"That's a bull's-eye," conceded fry I want a right nobody can dispute to be in the ring—to sit in your corner."

She smiled. "Again I love you, Dirk."

Going out in search of the finest car available, he walked on air. He was glad to be alive, glad to be relieved of the strain of driving and to sit in the back with his arm around Joyce, both of them wrapped in the same rug. Arrived in the city they drove straight to his little house and from her first glimpse of its exterior to the last long look within Joyce was conscious of pleased wonder and a steadily increasing sense of well-being. Here was a nurtured loveliness, unpurchasable in bulk, individual to the core yet with arms held wide to all devotees of good taste. She was happy in this house. Even Pablo, masking amazement, all but choking on suppressed joy at the return of his missing master, seemed of its warp and woof.

"What about a hot bath to start with?" asked Dirk.

"Splendid," she answered quickly, then her lips drooped. "I haven't anything to put on."

"Don't worry," said Dirk. "Search the world and you couldn't find a costume more becoming than what you're wearing to a person of your particular looks, size and adorable build."

"Silly head!"

"I can furnish you a soft shirt for a blouse and by the time you're ready for them the jodhpurs will have been brushed and pressed as sweet as a flower." He turned to Pablo. "Pablo, this is the senorita Joyce Sewell, from whom you may take orders as coming from myself, only more so. Give her into the charge of Paulina. As for the rest, I leave it to her since she talks Spanish better than either of you."

Dirk had not dismissed the hired car and without bothering to inform Joyce or even waiting to wash his hands he started for the embassy proper, passing the chancellery by. The great iron gate was opened by a strange porter but the man on the door was an old friend.

"Good afternoon, Antonio."

"Buenas tardes, Don Deerke," cried Antonio, excitedly, "buenas tardes, buenas tardes!"

"Is the ambassador at home and awake?"

"Si, senor; como no?"

"Tell him a Mr. Van Suttart would like to see him. Be sure you give the message just as I say it."

As they entered the vast living room the ambassador himself emerged with a rush from his study, stopped and stared. "Well!" he gasped, "I'll say you came on the run!" His eyes moved up and down. "Haven't you changed those clothes since you left?"

Dirk glanced downward ruefully,

GUIDE-BOOK to GOOD VALUES

When you plan a trip abroad, you can take a guide-book and figure out exactly where you want to go, how long you can stay, and what it will cost you. To save you time, the obliging author has marked especially interesting places with a star, or two or three—so that when you land in Europe, you know exactly where to go and what to look at. The advertisements in this paper are really a guide-book to good values... brought up to date every week. If you make a habit of reading them carefully, you can plan your shopping trips and save yourself time, energy and money.

Pretty Things for Easter

THESE three dresses are up high on the list of fashion's favorites, and you can easily make them at home by using our simple, easy-to-follow patterns, each accompanied by a complete and detailed sew chart. Start right now, for even if there's a shiver in the air at this moment, Easter is not very far off! And you'll want to be ready!

Dress With Lifted Waistline. This is a very, very popular fashion because it makes you look so slim and graceful, what with the waistline high in front, and soft flaring above it, the gently flaring skirt. Made up in a pretty print or silk crepe, it will be lovely for Easter and for all Spring.

A Jumper Frock for Girls. This is one of the sweetest and most becoming styles ever invented for girls of school age, just about the time they begin to shoot up so fast that you can almost see them grow! Make the jumper of linen, gingham or percale, and why not make two or three blouses to go with it? One of linen, one of dimity, and one of organdie.

Everybody Likes Dirndl Frock. The square neckline, the full rippling skirt and tight little waist, are so flattering to slim figures! Here's a charming dirndl with just the right air of quaintness and freshness about it. Choose a gay flowered print, or a cheerful plain color, pale or bright. But be sure, whether you make it up in silk or cotton, to choose a crisp fabric so that the skirt will flare as it should.

The Patterns. 1481 is designed for sizes 14 to 42 (32 to 42 bust.) Size 16 (34) requires 3½ yards of 39-inch material.

1996 is designed for 6 to 14 years. Size 8 requires 1¾ yards of 39-inch material for the jumper; 1½ yards for the blouse. Also 2½ yards of bias facing for neck and armholes of jumper.

1480 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 (32) requires 3½ yards of 39-inch material, plus 1½ yards of ribbon for belt and ¾ yards of braid or ribbon for trimming.

Spring-Summer Pattern Book. Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell Spring and Summer Pattern Book which is now ready. It contains 109 attractive, practical and becoming designs. The Barbara Bell patterns are well planned, accurately cut and easy to follow. Each pattern includes a sew-chart which enables even a beginner to cut and make her own clothes.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Red, Blue and Green Lights Seen as an Aid in Growing Greenhouse Plants

In the plant world, red means go ahead, green lights mean stop. Experiments conducted at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D. C., by W. H. Hoover, a scientist in the department of radiation, show that plants respond to colored lights by speeding up or slowing down their growth to zero.

The reason that plants exposed to green light cease to grow or slow down progress, is that they simply reflect the green through the coloring matter in their leaves, called chlorophyll. Thus, they fail to absorb the light, just as if they were growing in dense shade.

The reds, on the other hand, noticeably stimulated the process of development. Able to absorb the light, plants exposed to red and red-blue rays proved able to assimilate larger quantities of the carbon dioxide essential to their development and so speeded up to a corresponding rate of growth.

The process went on rapidly under exposure to rays so intense that they are invisible to the human eye. Plants can evidently distinguish ultra-violet light and reds far beyond the range of visibility for the human race.

While the sensitiveness of plants to rays of colored lights is a fact of general interest to gardeners, it will have an economic value, Hoover believes, in bringing specimens into bloom earlier or later than under ordinary conditions. Growers will be able, by flooding their greenhouses with green light, to hold back their plants or, by the use of deep red and blue rays, to force them into bloom far ahead of their season.

Papyrus Made From Plant Papyrus paper was used extensively in Greco-Roman times and was made of the papyrus plant, which grew in profusion along the Nile.

When Rossini Sneered at Wagner's Opera

Recalling an occasion when Arnold Schonberg, "impressionistic" composer, came to London to conduct a Schonberg program with "explosive" results, Sir John Squire is reminded of Rossini being taken by friends to hear an opera by the new marvel, Richard Wagner. The dialogue, after the show, ran like this:

Disciples—What did you think of it, Master?

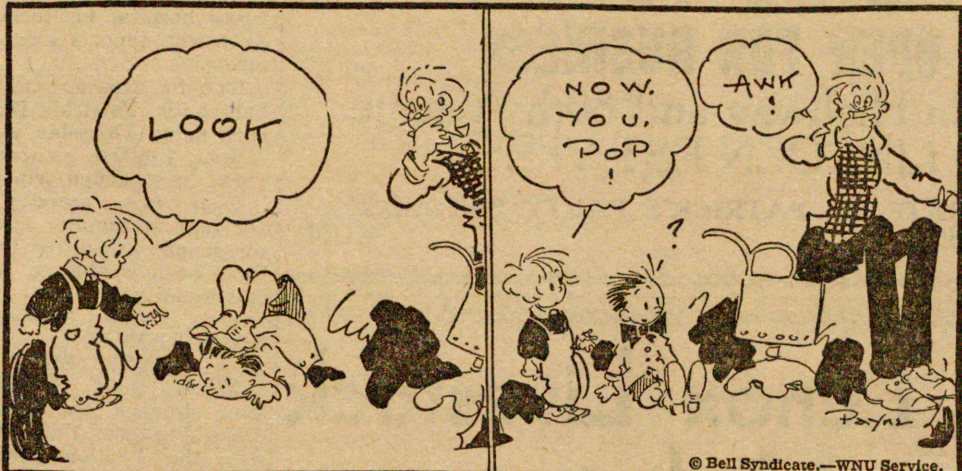

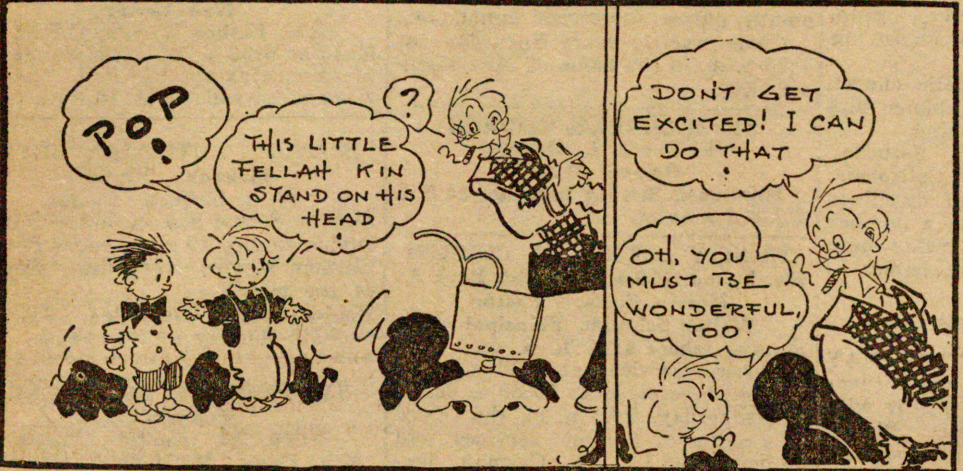

Rossini—I don't think it would be fair to express an opinion without hearing it a second time.

Disciples (eagerly)—And when are you going to hear it a second time, Master?

Rossini (emphatically)—Never!

TINLEY PARK

Wm. F. Koehler returned Monday night with his son Walter of Blue Island from a week's vacation spent in Florida. Mr. Koehler and son enjoyed deep sea fishing near Miami.
They report a good catch.

A 4 foot 10 inch Mocassin snake created a little excitement and was killed along the shore. A 1½ pound crab was brought home as a souve-neur. Mr. Koehler also shipped a crate of oranges to Tinley by express, charges running to $2.00 for the crate. Mr. Koehler also reports weather conditions were excellent, temperatures ranging from 80 to 85 degrees. Cocoanuts and bananas were also gathered.

The Ladies Aid of the Zion Lutheran church are planning to conduct a bazaar and bunco on May 4. More particulars will be given later.

The daughter of the Mollen family who were residents of Tinley Park about 8 years ago died last Friday at St. Francis hospital in Blue Island following an appendicitis operation.
Funeral services were held at Leland, Illinois, Sunday. A number of Tin-ley Park friends of the Mollen family attended the funeral.

The Civic club met Monday evening. A number of subjects were brought up for discussion and consideration. The annual election of officers was held and all the old officers were re-elected.

Mrs. W. B. Combs underwent an operation last week at the Mayo Cross hospital in Rochester, Minn.
At latest reports she is improving nicely.

The St. George Catholic church held a St. Patrick's Day bunco and card party Thursday evening.

John Koehler returned Saturday from an extended trip to California.
There is a scarcity of dwellings for rent in Tinley. Quite a number of people desiring to locate here have been unable to rent homes in this vicinity.

should consider the grave dangers which are present where these slot machines are allowed to exist and continue to extort their toll in robbing this community of several hundred dollars weekly. These dollars "ill spent" consist of hard earned money which should be expended for much needed family support instead of being contributed to "loot" for the support of "hoodlums".

The various public officials now holding public office who do nothing in regard to enforcing the law, violate the very principle of justice.

The law abiding citizens of New Lenox who are by far in the majority are cheated of their legal right of honest law enforcement. If public officials continue to display this laxity of law enforcement, is it not fair and logical to believe that other laws may be violated with their consent?

It is well to remember that this community is your home and what it is now and the moral standards it will exemplify depends entirely upon the action you and your neighbor take by insisting that public officials enforce the laws upon investigation we find the public official referred to in our last newspaper account has given us his cooperation and that no gambling devices now appear in his place of business. We trust the remaining operators will follow this praise worthy example.

As citizens it is your right and privilege to expect the laws to be enforced. Demand that they be enforced.

"THE FIVE HORSEMEN."

5 HORSEMEN DEMAND LAW ENFORCEMENT

It is of much interest to note many articles appearing in recent daily papers in regards to what action various communities in Illinois have taken, as definite steps to rid their districts of the slot machine menace. There is absolutely no question that respectable citizens everywhere are definitely opposed to this vicious form of racketeering. The people of New Lenox are no exception.

The removal of slot machines should have the support of every good citizen of New Lenox and they

The Golden Text was, "My God

Among the citations which com-following from the Bible: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook,
"Science and Health with Key to the

"Substance is that which is eternal

Truth, Life, and Love are substance,

Matt. 25:13. Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh Let us not miss one primary meaning. Death which comes to every man is one time when it is too late. It is too late then to put good intentions into actions, to rectify past wrongs, to give of our strength and time to the needs of men and women. In getting away from morbid thinking about death, have not multitudes of people put the thot of death entirely away from them, with the result that a carelessness has taken the place of a serious duty in connection with the duties of life.
Jesus said "I must work the works of Him that sent me while it is yet day, for the night cometh when no man can work." You have your life insured because it is uncertain.
Should not the same reason cause you to give your best and utmost service to the kingdom of God every day?

Some of Will County's Public And Political Leaders

Howard Sontag

Candidate for Republican Nomination for Sheriff

Howard Sontag of Lockport has made his announcement for the Republican nomination for Sheriff and from reports coming in from all sides he is going to be accorded splendid support. He stands for a square deal for the farmer, laborer and business man alike. He has shown a fine record as a citizen and possesses an understanding of what the people want and need in county government, in that part touching the sheriff's duties. He is amply qualified for this office. Howard Sontag of Lockport is a man of enviable reputation and promises the people that if he is nominated and elected to this office that he will use his ability and knowledge at all times to the point of always giving to the office the very best there is in him. He is thoroughly conversant with present day conditions and is qualified to readily grasp the different situations that are bound to confront our state and especially Will County.

Silas J. Johnson

Candidate for Republican Nomination for County Clerk

Silas J. Johnson, a world war veteran of Joliet has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for County Clerk and his candidacy is meeting with favorable comment, as we observe. He has never sought public office before. He possesses a distinguished Service Cross. He is 42 years of age.

He is backed with bookkeeping and business education. With his training he would be able to fill this office to the full satisfaction of the people. He possesses an excellent reputation and numbers his friends by the thousands, carrying the endorsement of many prominent Will County citizens.

Henry Lauterbach

Superintendent Will County Farm, Joliet

In our opinion, the post held by Henry Lauterbach, Superintendent at the Will County Farm in Troy Township at Joliet is one that requires an ability that is not possessed by the average individual.

Mr. Lauterbach has given a splendid service at this institution for the past six years and figures show that his management has been efficient and economical. Inmates are permitted to retain their self respect and identity.

We say truthfully that he has conducted this institution so satisfactorily that no adverse comment has been offered.

CHIEF DEPUTY SHERIFF

Gordon S. Breen

Candidate for Democratic Nomination for Sheriff

A man that performs his public official duties as has Chief Deputy Sheriff Gordon S. Breen, does not need an introduction to our readers. "By his deeds ye shall know him", how true this is, because, everybody knows him.

Gordon S. Breen is the candidate for the Democratic nomination for Sheriff in the coming primaries. During the four years that he has served as Chief Deputy Sheriff, he has gained much valuable experience.

If he is nominated and elected to this office he is pledged to a law enforcing administration, one that will combine efficiency and economy to the voters of Will County. His biggest asset as we see it is his ability and determination to serve the people of his county ably and well. We know him and know only good of him; he is ever a booster and never a knocker.

Cornelius D. Sullivan

Candidate for Democratic Nomination for State Representative

Cornelius D. Sullivan who has served as a Justice of the Peace in Joliet since 1933, has at the demands of his many Business, Labor, and Veterans' friends announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for State Representative and we say that he is sure to receive strong support.

Judge Sullivan is well fitted for this post and he would surely make a strong candidate if he is nominated. People recognizing this fact have urged him to run.

In the 1934 primaries Mr. Sullivan was defeated for the Democratic nomination for Probate Judge by the slim margin of 127 votes.

He studied law at night and earned his degree. He is a worthy and well known citizen and his friends are enthusiastic in their support of his candidacy.

Attorney Daniel Harrington

SENATORIAL COMMITTEEMAN

Candidate for Democratic Nomination for Re-Election

With the beginning of our modern civilization men have ordained laws for the protection and promotion of justice for every individual. We therefore have a group of highly intellectual men who have specialized in legal training to assist us in defining our laws.

Foremost among our legal group in Will County is Daniel Harrington of Joliet who is the Senatorial Committeeman. His record shows that he is fully qualified for this post, to which he seeks renomination and re-election.

He is rated as one of our clean-thinking community spirited citizens. His practice has made him one of Joliet's most prominent barristers.

Because of his outstanding service to us we feel that he well merits these words of facts we have given him in our feature columns, we have compiled in devotion to the outstanding notables of our section.

Ralph G. Yonke

Candidate for Democratic Nomination for County Treasurer

The coming primary election promises to be a great political fight and the forces that be are already preparing for the fray. But in Ralph G. Yonke, we see a man who needs have but little worry over his candidacy for Democratic nomination for County Treasurer. With no disrespect for the other contenders for this office, he is a logical choice that is showing a wide popularity.

Mr. Yonke has attained to his high standing because of his ability, an ability that proves beyond the peradventure of a doubt that he is capable of a real businesslike administration in this office, one that will show honest constructiveness, refreshingly absent from intrigue and selfishness.

Problem In Education

By Bernice T. Van der Vries, Member Education Committee, House of Representatives, General Assembly of State of Illinois.

What is the matter with American education? Why did President Roosevelt recently send to Congress a report, largely prepared by Chicago educators, which asks that the Federal government provide $855,000,000 over a period of years for American schools? Why have associations of school boards and teachers in Illinois so constantly impounded the Illinois General Assembly for huge increases in state aid for the public schools of Illinois? Why has Governor Horner steadfastly refused to countenance any such increased aid until the legislature shall have established a state board of education? And why have numerous individuals, politicians and civic organizations been unable to agree upon the kind of a State Board which would be able to really accomplish something beneficial to school?

All these questions are rooted in the fundamental thesis that in order to preserve democracy in this country there must be universal education of the electorate. No intelligent person is disputing this thesis; but there is grave concern over ways and means of financing schools adequately but at the same time so as not to take away the integrity of teachers' freedom to teach, nor from local school boards and administrators the freedom to operate schools on a local homerule basis. The questions can therefore be grouped in three classes:

1. The causes for and the meaning of aid for federal education.
2. The problem of state aid for the schools of Illinois.
3. The significance behind the almost universal demand for a state board of education.

I shall discuss in this article Cause No. 1.

There is nothing new in the idea of Federal aid to education. The state universities found their origin through Federal aid. Across the country there is a definite trail of land grants to public schools. Some of the most valuable real estate holdings of the Chicago board of education had this origin. One commentator says that the United States has given to the states an area larger than Italy in such land grants for schools, and today is giving some $54,000,000 yearly for vocational, agricultural and home economics instruction. In the United States there is being spent $2,400,000,000 annually to keep schools open, build new schools, teach adults, and to help youth in National Youth Administration and in the Civilian Conservation Corps. There is an office of education under the Secretary of the Interior, and for years there has been a campaign on the part of educators to have a department of education established in the United States government with its secretary in the president's cabinet. Moreover, there has been a continuous demand for very large appropriations from the Federal treasury to support schools that, according to common observation, cannot support themselves adequately to provide decent education to the children whom they serve. It is this latter situation which is the subject of the report recently completed by the commission headed by Professor Floyd W. Reeves of the University of Chicago.

There are four principal phases which the study of American schools discloses. These may be grouped under four questions:

1. Where are the most impoverished areas in America?
2. Where are the poorest schools in the country?

3. Where is the largest increase in child-birth?

4. What is the greatest source of the growth of our great urban populations?

Oddly, maps drawn with the greatest accuracy covering data answering these questions will, if superimposed on each other, match almost identically. That is, where we have the lowest standards of living among white people, we have the highest birth rate and the children suffering from the most inadequate educational facilities constitute the great stream of internal migration from the country to the cities. Greater significance attaches to this picture when we realize that the present populations of the cities where the greatest educational facilities are accorded do not reproduce themselves and that the traditions of American democracy, culture and standards of living, if they are to be perpetuated, must be the task of the underprivileged and under-educated people who, in order to escape the dreary monotony of the impoverished areas of the country, are constantly streaming to the cities.

Without going too much into detail it may be said that the area most greatly in need of the simplest fundamentals of education lie primarily in the southeastern and southwestern cotton belts, the neighborhoods of the great "dust bowl" the southern end of the Appalachian Mountains and in the cut-over timber areas of the Great Lakes. Generally speaking the future culture of America rests with the almost indigent children of the southern farmers. Contrary to general assumption, the southern negro is not a great factor in the situation at this time, due to heavy infant mortality.

To quote directly from the report of the Reeves committee, "Glaring inequalities characterize educational opportunities and expenditures for schools throughout the nation. The level of educational service that can be maintained under present circumstances in many localities is below the minimum necessary for the preservation of democratic institutions."

The question up to Congress will be how to assist in this national effort without endangering the very teacher, integrity and home-rule? Difficulties attendant to the federal administration of relief and unemployment give one cause to pause and consider the federal program of education.

The committee recommends that over a period of six years the great bulk of the money shall go for elementary and secondary education, but that considerable items should be allowed in the field of teacher training, school building, educational research, adult education, rural libraries and in state administration of education. It is suggested that for the first fiscal year, that of 1939-1940, the expenditures shall total $70,000,000, and that they shall increase until in the last year they shall amount to $199,000,000. The most significant thing, perhaps, about the recommendations is that the money shall be distributed among the states according to their local needs, thus barring federal control of what the schools should teach.

Since Illinois is second in wealth of the States of the Union it is doubtful whether any Federal funds would be allocated to this state although we have some of the poorest schools in the country. There is, however, special significance to the citizens of Illinois in this general movement, because of the activity of all friends of education toward the same general problem within our own state that is reflected on a greater scale in the entire national scheme of education.

A LOT OF CAR for a VERY LOW PRICE

The Standard Tudor Sedan

The Ford effort to make your dollars buy a constantly better car is well illustrated in the Standard Ford V-8.

It has all the basic Ford advantages. It is built on the same chassis as the De Luxe Ford V-8. It gives you a choice of smooth 85-horsepower or 60-horsepower V-8 engines. But it sells at low prices, and includes bumpers, spare tire, cigar lighter, twin horns and other equipment that make it a still bigger bargain.

With the thrifty 60-horsepower engine, the Standard Ford V-8 is priced especially low and gives the greatest gas mileage in Ford history. Hundreds of owners report averages of 22 to 27 miles a gallon—or even more.

Your pocketbook will approve of the Standard Ford in every way. And so will you when you drive it!

The Power of Taxation

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman

Sentinels of the Republic

Congress, as this is written, is deep in deliberation over proposed revisions of pending tax measures.

Somehow, there has been created the impression that these measures affect only that branch of American activity known collectively as business.

But this picture is incomplete. It covers too narrow a field.

What Congress decides, whenever it deliberates on taxes, affects profoundly every man, woman and child in our nation. It deals with the welfare of our great army of approximately 130,-

000,000 consumers.

Tax legislation can determine whether or not men should have jobs, and the amount of purchasing power which those jobs create. It can determine how well American families may live and progress. It can weave its influence through the entire fabric of our national economy.

For taxes, as every one knows, are a constant and inescapable part of our daily existence. Through the higher costs of necessities which unreasonable taxes entail, they intrude into the cost of all necessities.

They slip into the gas tank of every car and tractor; into the cloth of every suit and dress, into the rent or purchase price of every home and farm, into the cost-tag of every piece of home and industrial equipment, into the food basket of every housewife.

They can influence all production, all employment. For when they threaten the enterprise and the production which create employment, they threaten jobs.

Our recent record of mounting unemployment bears tragic evidence of this.

Taxation, therefore, should be above all politics.

It is everybody's business, everybody's burden.

That is something of which Congress should be reminded as it deals with this great national problem.

After years of suffering Mrs. Caroline Engelmann nee Esch was relieved from her suffering by death on Thursday evening, March 3rd at the age of 80 years, 3 months and 5 days. She was born in Green Garden township, November 26th, 1857, and spent the whole of her long life in the vicinity of her birth. She was baptized and received into the membership in the St. Peter's Evangelical church of Green Garden in which she was also united in marriage with Henry Engelmann in 1879. Since 1907 the family resided in Frankfort, having left the farm due to the infirmity of Mrs. Engelmann. She is survived by her sorrowing husband, two sons; Wm. and George, one daughter Mrs. Geo. Bettenhausen, nine grand - children three great - grand - children besides other relatives and a host of friends.

Burial services were conducted by Rev. G. S. Gerhold, pastor of the St. Peter's Evangelical church of which she was an active member until her death, on Sunday, March 6th, in Pleasant Hill cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our relatives, friends, and neighbors. We extend our thanks to Rev. G. S. Gerhold for his consoling words, the singers and organ player, and Ladies' Aid for the many kindness shown us at the death of my wife and our mother. THE NEW WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC IRONER

- Q. How much of the ironing will the New DeLuxe Ironer complete?
A. All of it. The ironer will iron every piece in the basket. Westinghouse bases this statement on reports of users—many of them.
- Q. Does it cost more to operate than a hand electric iron?
A. There is very little difference. Ironing is applying heat to fabrics by means of a smooth surface. The ironer does this faster—but needs only about the same amount of electricity to complete the job.
- Q. How long does it require to learn to operate an ironer?
A. Not as long as it takes to learn to operate a sewing machine. Many users report that they iron everything in the laundry the third time they use the ironer. Others take a little longer. Others finish the entire laundry on the ironer the first or second time they use it.
- Q. Can you press clothes on the ironer?
A. Yes, indeed. When you turn the control lever to "press," this stops the roll. The garment and pressing cloth are laid in place on the roll, and the pressing is completed.
- Q. Does the ironer save time and effort?
A. Yes, indeed. When you turn the control lever to "press," this stops the roll. The garment and pressing cloth are laid in place on the roll, and the pressing is completed.
- Q. Is the ironer automatic?
A. Yes, the Westinghouse ironer has two automatic controls, one on each end of the shoe. All you need do is to set the thermostat to the desired temperature and it will be automatically maintained.
- Q. How may I purchase an ironer?
A. During the month of March, we will give you a three-dollar certificate which can be used as the down payment. The balance is added to your Public Service light bill in small monthly payments.
- Q. What about a demonstration?
A. Stop at our display room any time for a complete demonstration.

Old Fashioned Cabin
Attraction at Palos

Mr. Lewis Baker is the owner of the old fashioned log cabin located at 121st street and 87th avenue, in Palos Park. The cabin was built in 1927 by 12 expert carpenters. The logs are neatly nailed together by wooden pegs, such as were used before the use of nails. It has been said that there is not even one nail driven through the logs, the entire cabin was put up with wooden pegs.

Its low rugged lines hint of the rambling pioneer dwelling. Its coloring, following that of nature is soft and blends in perfectly with its surroundings, which makes it appear as though it stood there for ages. Even the large stone chimney brings out the point of the earlier dwellings.

The cabin has three rooms with a hall, bath and balcony. The dining room and living room are combined in one large room. The broad hearth, deep fireplace and high ceiling can be termed historical. The room with its seventeenth century fireplace is reminiscent of the large kitchens of the earlier day, rooms in which the business of living largely took place. Antique and interesting fire implements which are many years old are arranged around the fireplace.

On the right hand side of the fireplace are shelves containing scores of books. Shelves such as these were used by the early pioneers before book cases came into use. On the left side of the fireplace is the dining room part of the room. A long narrow table and crude chairs are found there.

At the opposite side of the room is the balcony, which extends across the width of the room. The stairs and the banister are made of logs which lives up to the intentions of the cabin. The logs on the stairs are split in half and smoothed off with the rounded side underneath. The balcony is used chiefly for a guest room or bed room.

Homespun rugs, plaid curtains, Indian blankets, antique furniture, odd relics, primitive pottery and basketry and beadwork throughout the entire cabin gives the building that pioneer appearance. The vital red and strong contrasting black and white shades are very prominent in the woven rugs and Indian blankets. The bright colored blankets hanging from the balcony and walls boast the added distinction of an ancient Indian symbol as a center motif. Pottery, basketry, Indian relics and trinkets also have adequate display space. The windows are high but convenient.

The kitchen has many built in devices. Shelves of hand made dishes and pottery extend across one end of the room. More shelf space is found under the sink. The refrigerator is built in, even a closet for brooms and mops. A small antique work table and chairs add much to the kitchen.

The double deck bed, hand-woven rugs and gay plaid curtains lend a distinctive and comfortable atmosphere to the bedroom. There is one double deck bed, the other three beds are single. The single beds are mounted on four posts or logs which are built onto the walls. The moving of beds or furniture in this room, except for the clothes closet. Imagine moving a clothes closet to any desirable place. The closet has four walls, a roof, and a floor which is on rollers and can easily be pushed from one room to another.

Built-in closets, drawers and shelves are found in the hall and bathroom. Logs are built around the bottom of the bath tub.

An old fashioned dinner bell such as was used years ago to call the family to dinner is hanging by the back door. This is also used in place of a door bell. Instead of pushing the button or skinning the knuckles the bell is rung.

About five or six feet from the cabin is a well that is scored antique. A roof and a three foot stone wall certainly live up to the intentions of the back ground. The water is drawn up in a pail by means of turning a crank.

Even a playhouse of logs for the children. The playhouse has three small rooms, windows that can easily be pushed up and a door with an old fashioned lock on the inside. A man six foot tall can stand comfortably in the house.

The garage and maid's room are in the same building which is also made of logs and stained the same shade as the cabin and playhouse.

AMERICAN FOUNDATION FOR ANIMAL HEALTHHow to Care for Hogs Following
Vaccination

Observance of a few simple rules just before, and just after, hogs are vaccinated against cholera, would save many farmers a lot of trouble.

Probably the best time to vaccinate against cholera is around weaning time. The pigs are small, and require less serum; and immunization at this time will generally last throughout the life of the hog.

Before vaccination, the herd should be inspected by a veterinarian to make sure that no animals are suffering from enteritis, pneumonia, or some other herd disease which might produce complications.

After vaccination, the herd should be kept on clean pasture, free from mud holes or other sources of infection for about two weeks. Ample water supply should be available at all times. The daily volume of feed should be cut down immediately following vaccination, and the hogs should be given a simple, nourishing, low carbohydrate ration. One should never force-feed minerals, or physic the herd with salts or mixtures during this period, except on specific advice of a veterinarian.

In cold weather, newly-vaccinated herds should have roomy, well-bedded quarters. In summer, shade should be provided.

Over twenty-five years of experience have proved that one of the best investments a farmer can make, is to have his new pig crop vaccinated each year against cholera. The cost is nominal, the protection is positive, and the insurance, if cholera should strike the community, may spell the difference between profit and disaster.

Ralph H. Newkirk Asks Support At County Primaries

Ralph H. Newkirk, 1101 South Richard street, Joliet announces in this issue of the News-Gulletin, his candidacy for the Republican nomination for sheriff of Will County, asking support of our readers in the primaries to be held Tuesday, April 12.

Mr. Newkirk is known to the most of our readers as a business man, an executive and a property owner, endowed with all the qualifications to meet the requirements of the high office to which he aspires.

He is a native of Will County, his grandparents being pioneers; a son of James E. Newkirk, former sheriff, and for a number of years he has been engaged in the contracting and trucking business, in which he has demonstrated his ability as a business man. He has a wife and two children.

Mr. Newkirk recognizes the office of sheriff calls for an executive who will administer the important duties with sound judgment and fairness, a man who will give to everyone "Equal Rights Under The Law," and this is the promise he gives to every voter. Amplifying this promise he exhibits those sterling qualities which marked the regime of his father, James E. Newkirk, as sheriff, in declaring that if nominated and elected he will bend every effort to quelling the record of his father as sheriff who did his full duty, fairly, fearlessly and without dictation from any faction, and he will keep unsullied that record.

Mr. Newkirk guarantees to every resident of Will county, "Equal rights under the law", if nominated for sheriff in the primaries on April 12th and is again the choice of the voters in the general election this fall. He is free to carry on the executive duties of the office in a manner which will reflect credit to himself and success for the Republican party. He recognizes the need of economy in county business and considers public office a sacred trust.

ORLAND HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

The local teachers attended the Cook County Teacher's Institute at the Lyons Township High School in La Grange last Friday. The program was opened by Mr. Clarence M. Callahan, assistant County Supt. The first half of the session consisted of music by the Lyons Twp. High School orchestra; an address, entitled "What Is Youth Thinking?" by Dr. A. L. Sachar, and announcements. The last half of the program was music by the A Capella choir of Lyons Twp. Junior College. The orchestra and the choir were directed by C. F. Dissinger, Supt. Noble J. Puffer gave a short talk and address on the subject "The Preservation of Democracy" was made by Bishop G. Gromley Oxman.

On Monday the entire school saw two very fine films in the school auditorium. The first film was one made by the Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. titled "Working for Dear Life," and stressed the advisability of a physical examination by a doctor at least once a year. The second program was the two-reel film "Anchors Aweigh" a very interesting picture of the United States Navy. Films were shown of the large battleships, cruisers, submarines and airplanes during "War Games", passing thru the Panama Canal, attacking the enemy fleet and capturing an island. The students reported enjoying the films greatly.

BASKETBALL

Orland Park took part in the Mokena basketball tournament last Thursday evening. The grade school team played Manhattan at 7:30 and lost this game by a top heavy score.

The high school team played Mokena. This was a very fast game. Our boys were smaller and lighter than the Mokena team but during the first quarter Mokena was outplayed, the Orland players showing so much speed, fight and accuracy that the opposition was quite surprised. The first half ended Mokena 9, Orland 7. During the second half of the game Mokena's stamina told and they went ahead and kept their big lead until the final whistle.

Between the two games a free throw contest was held. Bill Davidson and Joe Heim represented Orland. Bill Davidson copped second place and presented to Orland Park high school his prize, a fine horse-fine inside seam softball.

WHY HOGS DIE— A FEW WAYS TO STOP LOSSES

When we realize that 40 percent of all pigs die before they reach a marketable age, it is easy enough to see what is the best starting place for increasing hog profits.

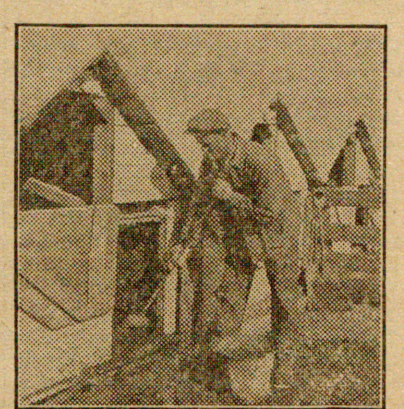

If we could even reduce the annual toll of swine diseases by 50 percent, the profits of our farmers would be increased by tens of millions of dollars.

The heaviest losses occur during the baby pig stage. These losses come from chilling, over-lying, pneumonia, nutritional anemia, white scours, navel infection, and similar causes.

During the shoat stage, chief causes of deaths are hog cholera, enteritis, internal parasites, erysipelas, and pneumonia.

To prevent losses in the baby pig stage, the first measures to be taken should include adoption of the McLean county system of raising pigs on clean ground, and the use of heated farrowing houses, with proper bedding and ventilation. If all farmers followed the McLean county clean ground system, this alone would cut swine mortality rates nearly 50 percent.

During the shoat and feeding stages, one of the greatest steps in preventing losses is to have hogs vaccinated against cholera. Hog cholera is still America's greatest swine destroyer, and immunization costs so little.

Swine losses could be reduced 50% by proper sanitation.

It is that no farmer should fail to have his herd protected.

Almost all swine diseases are preventable by sanitation, careful feeding and timely use of proper biological products. Periodic consultation and advice of the local veterinarian costs little and always pays dividends.

Seeds of Tyranny

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

During the past few weeks Americans have watched with a sense of apprehension the ominous shadow of despotism lengthening across the map of Europe.

To many students of government, however, neither the latest coup nor its predecessors came as a surprise. It was the inevitable outcome of a willingness to let group hatreds and group ambitions overwhelm and supplant the spirit of free and constructive patriotism.

In the case of virtually every nation that has accepted the dictator's yoke, such students can recall a preceding period of internal strife, of warring blocs and pressure groups, each intent in gaining for its adherents special advantages at the expense of the people, or the nation, as a whole.

Out of the turmoil caused by the multiplication of such blocs, and the accompanying encouragement of hatreds among the people themselves, has emerged the man or the group that seized all power.

Sometimes the turmoil was stilled—at the cost of all individual liberty. Sometimes it developed, instead, into tragic civil wars. Daily the headlines from abroad repeat the story.

In all this there is an obvious lesson for America.

Here is a country that in a century and a half of national existence achieved a growth in territory, in population, in resources, in tolerance, and in influence unsurpassed throughout history. Here is a nation that through concerted efforts of all its people established a standard of living unequalled elsewhere on earth.

This advance was not achieved through the process of class warring against class, of group crowding out group. It was achieved through methods—sometimes interrupted—of progressive cooperation.

Here is something for the preachers of dissent to ponder as they scatter the seeds of tyranny. Here is something for the American people to remember when they are asked to relinquish a policy of cooperation for one of class hatreds and domination by political pressure groups.

To such demands, whatever their source, there is one conclusive reply. It runs:

"See what has sprung from such seeds abroad."

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses PROTEINS—

The Foods That You Cannot Live Without

Eminent Food Authority Explains Why No Protein Means No Life—Describes the Kind and Amount Required for the Best Growth in Children—Good Resistance, Vigor and Endurance in Adults.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York.

FOOD is—and always has been—the central problem of life. But only in recent years has its true power been revealed, as a result of scientific investigation.

Fortunately, we now know what constitutes sound nutrition, and it is possible for every homemaker to plan meals that will enable her family to eat their way to health.

Toppling the list of food essentials are the proteins. The Dutch chemist, Mulder, who hit upon this name, made a wise choice, for it means "to take first place."

And certainly the proteins are first in importance. For they are the stuff of which our bodies are built. Without them, there would be no life.

Every man, woman and child has a fundamental need for protein, because it is an essential component of every living cell and makes up a large part of the solids of a muscle cell. Evidently, a great many of the glandular principles and substances, which control the functions of the body, are also protein in character.

Protein is the only food element that contains nitrogen, and next to water, nitrogen is the chief constituent of the human body.

Protein Builds Bodies.

A new born baby weighs, on an average, from 7 to 7½ pounds, and the adult into which it grows may weigh 20 to 30 times as much. The vast amount of tissue necessary to construct a man is built chiefly from protein.

Once the adult body is built, however, protein is not required for the growth of new tissues, except under certain conditions, such as during pregnancy, when one is recovering from a wasting illness, or when an athlete is in training and the muscles are increasing in size.

Keeps the Body in Repair.

There is, however, a maintenance requirement for protein which continues throughout life, and which applies to both children and adults. For the body may be compared to a machine, on which it is necessary to make allowance for the wear and tear of parts. Protein is the only substance that will rebuild the millions of cells which each day cease to function.

Thus, we see that protein performs two vital services—First, it builds new tissues; second, it repairs worn-out tissues.

The Building Stones of the Body.

Protein is found in many different foods, but unfortunately, not all proteins are equally valuable. That is because protein is a very complex substance, resulting from the union of 22 or more simpler substances containing nitrogen, and called amino acids. These are the true building stones of the body. Some protein foods may have only 7 amino acids represented in their substance; others may have as many as 15 or 16, and these also may be varied by the proportions of the kinds present.

Proteins Vary in Value.

Some of these amino acids are necessary to build new tissue; others will not build tissue, but are capable of repairing worn-out cells. Some protein foods are, therefore, more valuable to the body than others.

It is absolutely essential that the homemaker, charged with the responsibility of feeding a family, should be able to distinguish between those types of protein which are adequate for both growth and repair, and those that are only useful for maintenance.

For if the diet does not contain an adequate amount, or the right kind of protein, our bodies will be badly built and they will be improperly repaired and cannot wear well. As Dr. Eugene V. McCollum of Johns Hopkins university, the world-famous investigator and discoverer of vitamin A, puts it: "Unless the right kinds, with respect to the size and shape, are furnished by the food proteins, the exact pattern on which the muscle must be constructed cannot be formed and, in this case, growth is interfered with."

If you were building a house you would consider nothing less than the finest materials. You would know that cheap lumber and poorly made bricks could not produce a lasting building. In the same way, you must learn to discriminate between the various types of protein used for the supremely important purpose of building your children's bodies, or keeping adult physiques in perfect repair.

Some foods cost more than others and you should not be guilty of spending hard-earned money for expensive protein foods when the same amount of nourishment could be more economically obtained from an inexpensive source.

Where to Find Protein.

Proteins are found in many different foods, but unfortunately, only a limited number of foods supply proteins containing all the amino acids necessary for both growth and repair. Proteins that will build new tissue, as well as replace worn-out cells, are known as complete proteins. In this class we have meats, fish, cheese, milk, eggs and some nuts.

Other proteins are adequate for repairing worn-out tissue, but will not support growth. Such incomplete proteins are found in grains and products made from them, and in the legumes—that is peas, beans, lentils and peanuts.

The proteins of these foods are of high nutritive value, however, and when supplemented with other proteins, such as those of milk, will meet every bodily requirement.

How Much Protein?

The protein requirement varies according to size, age, and the kind of protein foods consumed.

To allow for growth, children require twice as much protein per pound of body weight as adults. That is to say, an adult requires daily one-thirtieth of an ounce for each pound of body weight, but a child needs one-fifteenth of an ounce for each pound of body weight.

The amount of protein food should usually constitute from 10 to 15 per cent of all the calories taken. If this plan is faithfully followed, there will be more than enough to take care of every requirement, because experiments indicate that a man who weighs 154 pounds, or 70,000 grams, needs a minimum of 44 grams of protein every day.

Eskimos eat two or three times as much protein as most dwellers in the temperate zone, but that is because other foods are scarce. In the tropics, on the other hand, the consumption of protein is often not more than half that of the temperate zone.

An Adequate Protein Ration.

Milk and eggs are among the finest forms of protein, and they should have an especially important part in the diet, not only of the growing child but of invalids, prospective mothers, and the mother who is nursing a baby. If the choice must be between milk and eggs, milk should have first place because it is usually cheaper in proportion to the food value it supplies.

In planning the family dietary, a safe rule to keep in mind is to include in the daily diet: a quart of milk for every child, a pint for each adult; one egg, one serving of meat, fish or chicken, one serving of another protein food such as cheese, dried peas or beans, or a main dish made with nuts.

You can achieve wide variety and still provide an adequate protein ration within the limits of this rule. For milk may be served as a beverage, in soups, puddings, and as cream sauce. Eggs may likewise be varied in their method of preparation, or concealed in other foods. There are many fine meats, and the number of ways in which fresh, canned, frozen or dried fish can be served is legion.

Both cheese and nuts make sandwiches, salads and desserts, as well as main course dishes. Peas, beans and lentils can appear as soup, mock roast or croquettes. Grain products, which include cereals, macaroni and bread, may appear in any course in the meal.

In planning menus, always keep before you the ideal that an adequate amount of first class protein makes a first class man, whereas an inadequate amount may lead to stunted growth, functional nervous diseases, lessened efficiency and the earlier approach of old age.

In choosing proteins to feed your family—remember that they take first place among foods, and that upon their wise choice rests your future welfare, your destiny—your life!

Polishing Ethics—Pro and Con

When fine furniture leaves the shop of the manufacturer, its finish has been professionally treated, to preserve its beauty—prolong its endurance. And from that time on, this furniture is best maintained by a quality light-oil furniture polish—first, on the shop floor of the furniture dealer—and then in the home. This is acknowledged and accepted as the best way to heighten its beauty—lengthen its life! But unfortunately, many housewives coat the finish of their furniture and woodwork with various shellacs and veneers—using them as a substitute for a fine oil polish and rubbing. And what a great mistake this is! For these coatings form a false finish over the true finish of the furniture; and resin and other destructive elements in them dry out the wood—toughen it—leave a sticky residue. When many layers have been applied, they accumulate as a crust over the finish, clogging it and clouding the natural beauty of the grain. This is the slack way to care for furniture. If the home-maker really "cares for" her furniture, she will frequently rub on a reputable light-oil polish, to preserve it—keep it lastingly lovely!

Other proteins are adequate for repairing worn-out tissue, but will not support growth. Such incomplete proteins are found in grains and products made from them, and in the legumes—that is peas, beans, lentils and peanuts.

KEEPING THE BODY STRONG

LESSON TEXT—Mark 6:53-56; Judg. 13:12-14; I Cor. 3:16, 17; Rom. 12:1, 2.

GOLDEN TEXT—Now therefore beware, I pray thee, and drink not wine nor strong drink, and eat not any unclean thing.—Judg. 13:4.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Body God Gave Us.

JUNIOR TOPIC—For Jesus' Sake.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Liquor, Drugs, and Tobacco Do to Health.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Intemperance Affects Health.

The universe of God is perfectly organized in every respect. Beings that function in the spirit realm are spirit beings, not subject to the limitations of the physical world. We who dwell and serve in the physical world are equipped with physical bodies which are ideal instruments for our present existence.

With all their shortcomings and frailties, our bodies are indeed marvelous machines, intricate and delicate, yet unbelievably hardy and durable. They are a gift from God, and it is our express responsibility to glorify God in our bodies (I Cor. 6:20).

I. How to Have a Strong Body.

It is obvious that not every one has equal physical strength and health. In some measure this is by divine providence or at least by God's permissive will, and those of us who find ourselves thus limited do well to count on His grace for patience to use what we have for His glory. But not one of us wants to yield hopelessly to our inability. Rather we will do our best to overcome it. We want to know

1. How to cure weakness (Mark 6:53-56).

God alone can heal the sick. Even in our day when science has made such strides in the healing art, we note that the most successful remedy or system of treatment is the one that clears the way for what men call nature, but we know to be God, to work. Jesus healed the multitudes in the land of Gennesaret; He heals in America.

2. How to prevent weakness (Judg. 13:12-14).

The mother of Samson, who was to be a Nazirite, was to drink no wine and to observe careful dietary regulations before he was born.

Note also that if it is bad for a man to have such poisons in his veins before he is born, surely it is poor judgment to put them in after he comes to the age where he controls his own life. We need to watch our diets, and we have much valuable help on that point. We also need to give serious attention to the use of narcotics. It may surprise some to know that the term narcotics includes not only drugs and alcoholic beverages, but also tobacco, and such common things as tea and coffee.

Other abuse of the body, such as overwork, neglect of rest, etc., may well be mentioned. The besetting sin of some Christian workers is the destruction of their bodies, the very temple of the Holy Ghost, by overwork.

II. How to Use a Strong Body.

Unfortunate as it is to observe that some who would serve the Lord have to struggle with the weakness of the body, it is far sadder to note that all too often those who have strong bodies forget to use that strength for God. Our Scripture portions give us two excellent guiding principles. Our bodies should be

1. Kept for God (I Cor. 3:16, 17). These verses refer to the body of the Christian, for only of him can it be said that his body is the temple of the Holy Ghost.

The Holy Spirit is a person, the third person of the blessed Trinity. He comes to dwell within the soul of the Christian immediately upon his being regenerated, thus making his body the temple of the Holy Ghost. A clear grasp of that truth solves the problem of what we should do with and for our bodies. We must keep them well and clean. We dare not defile them in any way. The body of the Christian is kept for God.

2. Yielded to God (Rom. 12:1, 2). It is a high and noble sacrifice to die for Christ.

But our call just now is to be a "living sacrifice." There are times when that may seem harder than to be a martyr. We do know that it is not always easy to live through the drab, difficult, and sometimes dreadful days, with a clear and shining testimony for Christ. But it can be done and is always to His glory. It is by the transforming grace of God that we are enabled to live such a life.

Meditation

How Modern Tree Surgeons Parallel Doctors of Medicine In Saving Lives of 'Patients'

MODERN tree surgeons are careful with their "patients" as the average doctor of medicine. The main differences are (1) tree surgeons don't use anaesthetic and (2) the patient submits without being stretched out on an operating table. Among America's foremost tree surgeons is George Van Yahres, who has carried on and modernized the technique developed by the father of Martin L. Davey, present governor of Ohio.

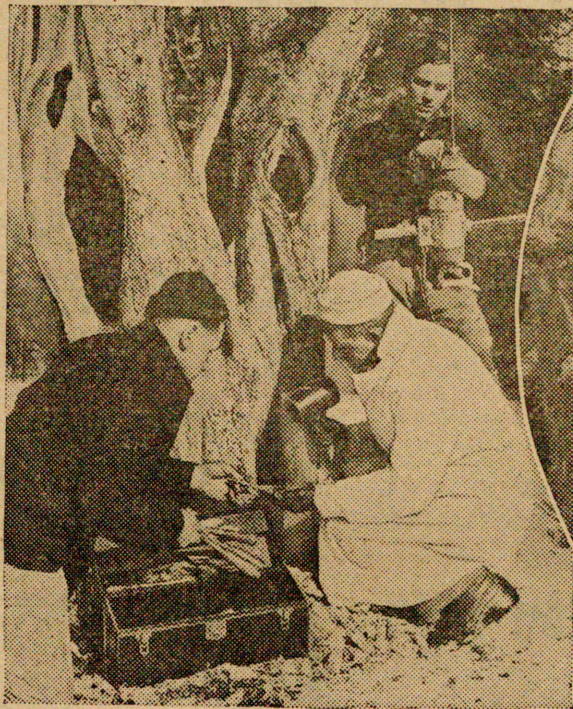

Only recently has American tree surgery come into its own, popularized by the ever-growing trend to conservation. Once men were glad to destroy worm-eaten and ailing trees; now they protect them, for trees are not as plentiful as they used to be.

In these pictures Mr. Van Yahres shows FOTO-FEATURE readers how his skilled crew of surgeons restore life and vigor to sickly trees, following step by step the practices of up-to-date human surgery in hospitals. Below he makes his "diagnosis," examining the bark or "skin" of the tree where symptoms indicate there is decay. Vibrations from hammer taps tell him where the trouble is centered. This, obviously, is the first step.

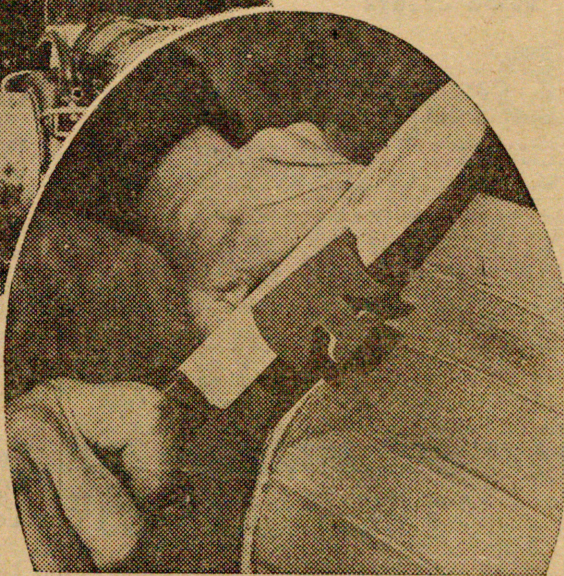

FOTO-FEATURE

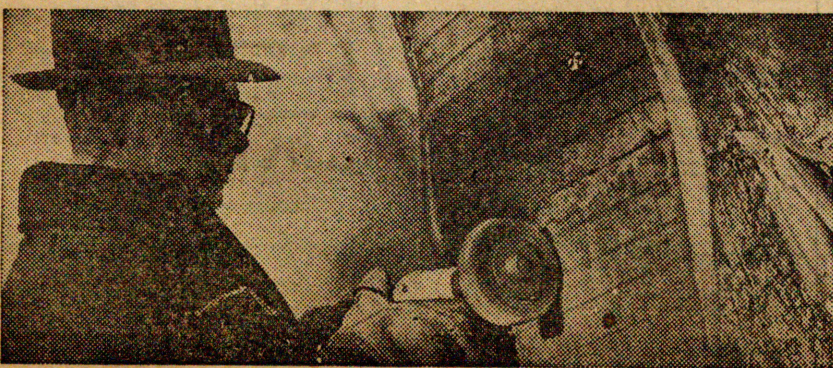

UNLIKE the M. D., a tree surgeon can't choose his working place. Incisions are made with chisels and mallets, being kept clean and small. Next (above) assistants clean out decayed matter.

AFTER the wound is cleaned, a lacquer antiseptic is painted on the inside and a waxy mixture is placed in the cavity. "Sewing up" the wound is a delicate step (see above). Van Yahres experimented with several substances until engineers of the B. F. Goodrich laboratories developed for him a special vulcanized rubber block which takes the place of sutures used to make stitches on human bodies. Left: Finally the operation is complete, the wound "sewed" and dressed and the "patient" on its way to recovery. The tree shown here has begun to roll back its bark over the incision. In time the wound will close completely.

EVEN plastic surgery has its parallel in the tree surgery business, says Mr. Van Yahres. The step illustrated at the left took place during the above operation. A worker is buffing the rubber sutures with a power-driven wire brush, making the finished surface blend with the tree bark. And (right) wounds in trees drain, just as they do in humans, aided by a tube.

LEFT: Human bones sometimes need bracing, and so does the "skeleton" of a tree. Hence strong bolts are inserted after the cavity has been cleaned out. Power-driven drills make quick, clean (and painless, we presume) holes for the braces. Above: Here is the variety of instruments—each with a definite purpose—which must be at the tree surgeon's finger tips. Doesn't this layout resemble the trays of instruments in an operating room?

2-WAY RELIEF FOR THE MISERY OF COLDS

The speed with which Bayer tablets act in relieving the distressing symptoms of colds and accompanying sore throat is utterly amazing . . . and the treatment is simple and pleasant. This is all you do. Crush and dissolve three genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.

This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases promptly; rawness is relieved.

You will say it is remarkable. And the few cents it costs effects a big saving over expensive "throat gargles" and strong medicines. And when you buy, see that you get genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

The Useful Chicken

One person has said that the chicken is the most useful of all farm animals because "you can eat it before it is born and eat it after it is dead."

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out. Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbances. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.
